

Lucky and her new friend relaxing at the Pet Bed & Breakfast.

Home away from home for pets

April 2003

Hi Mom, Dad & kids,

I'm writing you from the Pet Bed and Breakfast. It's noon here and all my little feline friends have pretty much settled down for their naps after a very busy morning of fun and frolic.

I know you gave me a heads-up about what to expect here and we even went on the Web site beforehand, but I was still a bit nervous about being alone at the B&B. The other feline boys and girls, as well as the owner, Melanie Walker (all of the guests here refer to her as Aunt Mel), made my first night's stay very comfortable. Since I am your pampered eight-year-old female long-haired calico, I know what I like and don't like. My napping areas of preference, as you know, should be ideally on very soft, foamy or fleecy surfaces and in places with minimal distraction. There are many of these spots to choose from here. I'm a girl that loves to have choices.

There is so much to do here. I am a people's cat and enjoy the many visitors and other moms, dads & kids dropping off and picking up their furry felines. The two big windows are fun to look out of or recline in front of while sunning.

BUSINESS NEWS

Many of the other cats told me they have vacationed here before; some of them, like Spunky, are regular weekenders. I hope he's in next time. He is a very friendly big orange calico. He is cute too!

Well, I think I'll join my other friends for an afternoon nap. I know you weren't worried to bring me to the Pet Bed and Breakfast. I'm glad you did. Other cats are not as scary as I always thought they were. I boarded here for the long weekend, but I was not bored!

See you soon,
Love, Lucky
